Discovering the Unknown in the Artistic Process

Choreographer and performance/installation artist Joe Goode has explored the artistic process in both individual and collaborative work. In his latest work at Krannert Art Museum, "About What's Underneath," he looks at the pursuit of tranquility or inner peace in artistic experience in the context of American culture that commodifies both peace of mind and art.

"About What's Underneath" premieres at KAM on October 22. This project at UIUC developed out of the Exhibitions Working Group (EWG), an inter-disciplinary, collaborative group exploring the potential of both the arts and a university art museum on a large research campus.
