

MILLERCOMM89

Education Under War Conditions: The Challenge in Southern Africa

Mozambique occupies a frontline position in the southern African struggle against apartheid. Graça Machel has played a prominent role in this struggle. After receiving an advanced degree in Lisbon in the early 1970s, she became a leading member of FRELIMO, the movement struggling for Mozambican independence. A participant in negotiations for independence, she was appointed Minister of Education and Culture at the moment of independence in 1975. She remained Minister of Education until early this year. President Samora Moises Machel, whom she married in 1975, was killed in a mysterious plane crash on South African soil in October 1986.

27
FEB

Monday 8:00pm 1989

314 Altgeld Hall
1409 West Green Street, Urbana
University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Graça Machel

Former Minister of Education of the Government of Mozambique

College of Education
School of Human Resources and Family Studies
Department of Anthropology
Department of History
Department of Linguistics
Department of Political Science
Department of Sociology
Afro-American Cultural Program
Afro-American Studies and Research Program
Center for African Studies
Office of International Agricultural
Office of Women in International Development
Program in South and West Asian Studies
Unit One
Women's Studies Program
Champaign-Urbana Coalition Against Apartheid (CUCAA)
University YMCA
University YWCA
George A. Miller Committee