Global food security, pacifier of families and chronic malnutrition, confronts global politics: war, international trade, greed. Can global food security become a reality?

Per Pinstруп-Andersen, 2001 World Food Prize Laureate, explores the links between economic inequities, international instability, terrorism, and other issues common in developing countries such as poverty, hunger, and hopelessness.

This is the first of a series of public lectures on Global Food Security sponsored by ACES Global Connect, the international arm of the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences. For more information consult <http://www.aces.uiuc.edu/global>.
