Ralph Bunche A World View of Race

Ralph Bunche, the first black Nobel laureate (for Peace in 1950), was one of this century's preeminent African-American intellectual and political leaders. Charles P. Henry, author of Ralph Bunche: Redefining the American Other and editor of Ralph J. Bunche Selected Speeches and Writings, covers five decades of Bunche's remarkable influence as the first black American to receive a doctorate in Political Science, a co-founder of the National Negro Congress, and undersecretary-general of the United Nations whose passion for peace and civil rights never faltered.

The Third Annual W.E.B. DuBois Lecture

This lecture is held in conjunction with the University's week-long Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemorative Symposium "Living Dr. King's Dream in the New Millennium." For more information please contact Nathaniel Banks, African American Cultural Program, 217-333-2092.
