

Gender Duties and Daily Life in Late Nineteenth-Century Latin America

Women, Law, Property, and Family in Mexico

Carmen Ramos' presentation will integrate legal, cultural, and social issues through an international and multi-disciplinary perspective on historical conflicts involving women as citizens and as mothers, property, and family formation. Her work, focusing on the Mexican case, opens new avenues of inquiry on gender and modernity with both historical and contemporary significance. Ramos' vision of the turn-of-the twentieth century provides new reflections on our current entry into the twenty-first century.
