

Chief Scientist, Xerox Corporation and Director Xerox Palo Alto Research Center (PARC)

JOHN SEELY BROWN

Are we stuck in outmoded assumptions about how we learn, work and create value? Are our current assumptions about how to design and use computers still relevant? In this talk we will revisit these assumptions and consider some design challenges we now face for using computers to support both the individual and the social mind.

MILLERCOMM95

The Seventh Daniel Alpert Lecture:
Relating the search for new knowledge to the enhancement of public understanding.

Design that Honors the Social Mind: Beyond Descartes and the Information Revolution

Monday 7:30pm 1995
Colwell Playhouse
Krannert Center for the Performing Arts
500 South Goodwin Avenue, Urbana
University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

10
APR

School of Art and Design
Department of Anthropology
Department of Business Administration
Department of Computer Science
Department of Educational Policy Studies
Department of Educational Psychology
Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering
Department of Mathematics
Department of Mechanical and Industrial Engineering
Department of Philosophy
Department of Psychology
Department of Sociology
Department of Speech Communication
Advanced Information Technologies Group (AITG)
Institute of Aviation
Institute of Communications Research
Institute of Government and Public Affairs
National Center for Supercomputing Applications (NCSA)
Office for Mathematics, Science and Technology Education (MSTE)

Office of the Chancellor
Office of the Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs
Office of the Vice Chancellor for Research and the Graduate College
Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs
The Council of Deans
The Center for Advanced Study
George A. Miller Endowment
George A. Miller Committee