

Asian-Pacific Americans Discuss Affirmative Action

Affirmative action has become a politically charged public policy, with repercussions affecting attitudes and opportunities across cultural, racial, and economic boundaries.

Der

D'Souza

Henry Der and Dinesh D'Souza represent two very different perspectives as they consider the intent, the reality, and the future of affirmative action.

This presentation is part of the University-wide Asian American Awareness Month. Please contact 333-0050 for a complete schedule of planned events.

For background information, please consult www.cas.uiuc.edu or the Miller Events Line, 333-1118.

MillerComm is a program of the Center for Advanced Study.
